DETAILED DESCRIPTION OF THE INVENTION

The invention is a combined greeting card and reply post card consisting of three panels or pages.

The first and second panels or pages are a greeting card portion of the combination and the third page or panel is a reply post card portion.

The first and second panels or pages are connected to each other by a fold line along one of their edges and the third panel is connected to another edge of the second panel or page along one of its edges by a line of weakness so that the reply post card portion may be detached from the combination.

The invention provides a combination greeting card and reply post card wherein the combination can be separated by the recipient.

The combination greeting card and reply card provides the recipient with a greeting card for a given occasion and also the means to send his personal details on to the greeting card publisher or on to any organisation that produced such a card.

The greeting card portion comes with artwork on its front cover and a greeting message inside as is normal with most other greeting cards, the reply post card portion is printed with the return address details of the card publisher and on its reverse side has space for the recipient to write in his personal details, the reply post card portion thus provides a means for the recipient to send his details on to the card publisher.
